

overview

Our summer camp program runs from July through August. The camp takes place at 143 Waverly Ave in Fort Greene and utilizes the garden and open space next to our building, as well as the kitchen, dance, music and art studios in the basement and our rooftop playground.

Our 22,000 square foot center in Fort Greene, Brooklyn, is a creative vibrant setting for children to explore, learn and interact by finding new ways to express themselves every summer.

Our highly qualified teachers are artists in their respective fields and come from all around the world, carrying a special enriching experience for your child.

TRILOK is a Sanskrit word meaning three worlds. Trilok Fusion Arts Camp is based on three P's: project, production and performance. A central story or author is selected, offering the camp a theme that highlights cultural explorations of a unique part of the world. The children learn dance, music, photography, yoga, cooking, art, theater, technology and set-building in the process of creating a dance-drama interpreting the chosen theme. The session culminates with a children's performance, which is open to the parents and to the public.

Our Executive Director, Sudha Seetharaman, is an Indian classical dancer by training and believes in the transformative universal nature of the arts. This is the spirit our programs embody bringing a passion for exploration, learning and discovery.

trilok fusion arts

was founded in 1996. Our mission is to bring together artists of varied cultural backgrounds, to collaborate and create work and performances that embody the roots of their respective traditions and find a common language in the space of art & performance.

Through our multi-cultural programming, and the fusion of diverse art forms, Trilok Fusion aims to preserve tradition while inspiring audiences and students to develop a solid understanding of their art and deep appreciation for world cultures.
